THE EXCELLENCE OF SYRUP OF FIGS

is due not only to the originality and simplicity of the combination, but also to the care and skill with which it is manufactured by scientific processes known to the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP Co. only, and we wish to impress upon all the importance of purchasing the true and original remedy. As the genuine Syrup of Figs is manufactured by the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. only, a knowledge of that fact will assist one in avoiding the worthless imitations manufactured by other parties. The high standing of the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. with the medical profession, and the satisfaction which the genuine Syrup of Figs has given to millions of families, makes the name of the Company a guaranty of the excellence of its remedy. It is far in advance of all other laxatives, as it acts on the kidneys, liver and bowels without irritating or weakening them, and it does not gripe nor nauseate. In order to get its beneficial effects, please remember the name of the Company—

BROOD SOWS.

Suggestions In Regard to Their Proper Care.

The proper care of brood sows, writes A. N. Springer in Land and a Living, is very essential to a successful swine breeder. Without it, it is impossible to have pigs mature enough to dispose of at the age of 6 or 8 months. With it, as has been demonstrated time and again, it is readily done. The care of the sow must begin at the beginning, and it stands to reason that a gilt from a sow that has had proper care and feed will be a better individual than one from a dam that has not had the best of care. Though their treatment is the same from pigs up, there will be a difference more or less plainly to be seen in favor of the former.

Sows should never at any time be allowed to get poor, but should always be kept in good flesh. Neither should they be fat—that is, in marketable condition. A sow fed to this degree of fatness cannot be a first class mother; her superabundance of fat will render her clumsy if nothing more. Her food, then, should be mostly such as tends to promote the growth of bone and muscle. The above mentioned kind of food should predominate at all times unless it be for a short period after weaning the pigs. If, as it sometimes happens with the best of care and intentions, a sow gets below the normal in flesh, then it would be necessary to increase the flesh or fat forming foods until she has regained her proper amount of fat.

Care must be exercised at all times when a change in food is made, as therein lies a very great danger. A too sudden change and an excess of feed will very often play sad havoc with one's plans. Make haste slowly in changing feed. Sows due to farrow in the fall should be fed very sparingly of green corn. Some oats and milk and grass should be their principal feed. Where they are not due to farrow until well along in October the corn can be fed with less danger, always providing one exercises the proper amount of caution in beginning as to amount fed. A good, dry, warm shelter is necessary for this time of year for the welfare both of sow and prospective litters.

Shorthorns For the General Farmer.

I do not assert that the Shorthorns are the only breed that have a place in this country, but I do affirm that they have a place that cannot be filled by any other breed. By the general farmer we do not mean the gardener or dairyman living near a large city, neither do we refer to the ranchman, but the man with 100 acres of land, situated several miles from market. He does not make a specialty of any one thing, but feeds his lands by a rotation of crops. He keeps just such stock as will consume his own productions of hay, fodder and grain.—C. C. Shaw in National Stockman.

Feed For Ewes In Winter.

In winter I do not like to keep my ewes that are going to raise lambs chiefly on corn. I feed one part corn, two parts oats and two parts bran, with all the clover hay they can eat. If you have not clover hay to feed your sheep this coming winter and are going to compel them to eat timothy hay, you would better have shot them when the winter commenced rather than see them die after you have brought them through to the spring. You must be careful on this line. Of course corn fodder is good for sheep, next to clover hay.—S. H. Todd.

GRANDMA'S FRIED CAKE.

Oh, the day dawns on the prairie, and the dew is on the rose
In the dreamy time of boyhood, when an elfin bugle blows,
For a sweet soul bud to hasten to where grandma likes to make
Just the plumpest,
Tooth delighting,
Sugar coated
Fried cake.

Oh, the prairie hawk is flying far beyond our visual sense!
Oh, the beauteous colors dying just before star firmaments!
Oh, the bloom and bliss of boyhood, when the grandmas like to make
Just the plumpest,
Tooth delighting,
Sugar coated
Fried cake.

Oh, the rainbow days are passing, and a prairie rise or scar
Seem to me directly under our dear Father's brightest star!
Oh, the love light that has faded! Oh, the man sometimes does ache
For the plumpest,
Tooth delighting,
Sugar coated
Fried cake.

STORY OF A NOSE.

The furor that Cyrano's nose has made in two continents makes timely the question, How would a play turning upon a fascinating woman with a bulbous turnip nose be received? It doubtless would be at once doomed to disaster. The question of such a proboscis upon a woman is wittily handled in the sparkling little translation from the Spanish which we print herewith. It is reminiscent of the anecdote which is told of Arago, the famous French scientist, who was gifted by Providence with a great brain and a mighty nose. During carnival time—when in Paris in the old days all sorts of pranks and curious costumes were permitted—Arago found himself in an omnibus opposite a mother and her infant child. At sight of Arago's extraordinary beak the infant set up a dismal wail. The mother at first attempted to quiet the terrified infant, but, failing, took courage in her two hands, as the French say, and at once impulsively exclaimed to Arago, "Oh, monsieur, I beg of you to take off your nose!" The irritated scientist was obliged to explain that his nose was not a carnival nose, but that it belonged there. The incident in this little translation suggests the Arago anecdote.

"My little masquerader, is it possible that I am not to see your face?"

"It cannot be. The desire of gratifying you counsels me to keep the mask on."

"Your conversation charms me and every word increases my impatience to know you."

"Did you not call me the sweet object of your inspiration? While I remain concealed I am sure of hearing flattering expressions from your mouth, to which I am not accustomed perhaps. If I remove this protecting crape from my face, then farewell to illusion!"

"This modesty is to me the best proof of your merit."

"Yes, I have the merit of being modest—no, I am wrong—I mean of being sincere."

"You—you are not ugly. I can swear it. Only one thing would grieve me," I continued, "if you should unmask."

"What?"

"That it would not be lawful to speak to you as to a mountain girl—as to a masquerader. Now I speak to you as an intimate friend or a lover would do."

"Were I to commit the indiscretion of taking off my mask you would hasten to leave me. You would hardly be able to articulate an indifferent and irritable 'Farewell, lady.'"

"I will suppose for a moment that you are ugly, hideous. Could you remove with the mask the spell that allures me? If the attractions of your conversation, of this voice that bewitches me, of this grace that charms me, can be removed with the mask, how can a woman appear ill with such gifts? If your face is ugly, I pardon you for it."

"But are you more indulgent than other men? In their eyes ugliness is a woman's greatest crime."

"Oh, I am of another species, or else you calumniate the men, little mountain girl. Undo this mask that torments me, and you will see how, far from being cooled, my affection will augment. Do not believe my proposition is so venturesome. Where can this ugliness reside with which you pretend to frighten me? Do I not behold the elegance of your shape? Do I not clasp your beautiful hand? Am I not fascinated with your small and graceful foot? Does not the palpitation of that heavenly bosom reveal the greatest enchantment? Do not the beams of light from those charming brown eyes pierce me? Those ebony tresses, that form such a lovely contrast with the dazzling whiteness of your throat, whose are they but yours? If there was anything so ill, I should know it. Does it lie in the movement of your head—which I have not yet seen—or in the delightful smile of your divine mouth?"

"I assure you that I am frightful! I should horrify you if I uncovered my face."

"That is impossible. The charm of your lily white brow, exquisitely modeled cheeks, entrancing nose"—

Here she interrupted me with a burst of laughter.

"You laugh! Does your nose chance to be—Roman?"

"Or Carthaginian? I don't know. I will not engage to say."

"I accept the consequences of the favor I entreat. With that mouth, with those eyes, that incomparable form, I permit you to be flat nosed or long nosed."

"You are impudent."

"No, I am not. Reveal yourself."

"Rash man!"

"Will you oblige me to go upon my knees? Will you expose me as the laughing stock of the company?"

"Enough. As you will. You are about to see me with the mask off. But let it not be my hand that shall open Pandora's box. Receive through your own the punishment for your foolish impatience."

"Perdition take the knot! I can't untie it. Ah, my knife—that is it! Beauti"—

I could not finish the word, such was my surprise, amazement, terror. What a nose! What a nose! Oh, what a nose! I would not have believed that nature was capable of arriving at such a degree of pleonasm, hyperbole, amplification. The sonnet of Quevedo, "Erase un hombre a una nariz pegado," (There was a man attached to a nose), would be poor and colorless to paint it. This was no human nose. It was a beet root, a cornerstone, an Egyptian pyramid. If it is just to condemn everything unseasonable, everything exaggerated, why is it that a law is not given against the exaggeration of noses?

In the midst of the horror which this mournful discovery caused me I wanted to withdraw myself from the large nosed mountain girl without incurring a rude remark from her. I made incredible efforts toward some expression of gallantry. Impossible. If I could have had a mirror before me, I am sure I must have seen a foolish face.

Fortunately for me, the mountain girl—who doubtless had learned to resign herself to her deformity, likewise to all its effects—laughed quite good humoredly, whether at my conflict or at herself I did not know. This gave me courage to rise, under the pretext of going to greet a friend. And, without daring to look at her again, I took my leave with a formal "Farewell, senorita."

Shame gave wings to my feet; wrath blinded me; the ground failed me in my flight. I stumbled over furniture, against persons, over myself, and would have walked home without waiting for the coach or to get my overcoat. I flew, then, to the refreshment room, took possession of a table, snatched up the bill of fare, asked what they could bring me the quickest. I ate, now, not with appetite, but furiously, from four different plates, and they were about to bring me the fifth, when I beheld seated in front of me—divine justice!—the same mountain girl, or, rather, I should say, the same nose which had horrified me shortly before. My first impulse was to rise and run, but the merry girl petrified me by saying with infernal sweetness:

"What! Are you not going to invite me to supper?"

I felt troubled and looked sheepish. The nose laughed, and so, to my discomfort, did the gallant who accompanied her. I would have liked to wreak my rage upon him.

"Senorita"—

"It shall not cost you much—a glass of wine; nothing more."

Such impudence stung me keenly, and I resolved on being revenged by mocking her.

"I shall have the greatest pleasure in complying with your demand, senorita, though I fear that your nose will prevent you from putting a glass to your lips. If you cannot take it off, as you did your mask, I do not know how"—

"You are rude, sir, but I shall be gracious. I will remove it."

"How? What do you say? Then"—

At this instant her hand darted up to her nose and she tore it off!

Alas, it was false! It was pasteboard, and it left her real nose revealed, no less graceful and perfect than the other features of her face.

How shall I depict my shame, my desperation, on beholding such an exquisite creature, and the remembrance of the levity, the discourtesy, the iniquity of my conduct! I was going to beg a thousand pardons, to lament my error, and, prostrated, kiss the dust at her feet, but the cruel one took the arm of her escort, disconcerted me with a severe look, and, imitating my cold manner of a short time before, said, "Farewell, senor!" and she burst into a peal of mocking laughter.

I never saw her more.—From the Spanish For Argonaut.

A Lion's Sympathy.

Edgar Quinet in his journal tells how one day he went with the naturalist, M. Geoffroi de St. Hilaire, to the Jardin des Plantes: "In one of the cages were a lion and a lioness together. They were standing up, quite motionless, and seemed not even to see us. Presently the lion, lifting up his great paw, placed it slowly and softly on the forehead of the lioness, and both continued in the same attitude as long as we remained before them. What was intended by the gesture? A painter who should have desired to represent calm grief and the deepest compassion could not have invented anything more striking. 'What does it mean?' said I to Geoffroi. 'Their lion whelp died this morning,' replied he. Then I understood what I saw—pity, good will, sympathy—all these sentiments might be read in those fierce countenances."—Cassell's Magazine.

Patti's Voice.

All of our leading vocalists are exceedingly careful of their voices and study their daily bills of fare with the most minute anxiety as to what they shall eat or what they shall drink. Probably few of our principal queens of song are more careful about their voices than Mme. Patti. She does not bother very much about her bill of fare, but makes a point whenever she is appearing at a concert or in an opera not to speak a single word all day to anybody previous to her appearance.—London Answers.

A Delayed Execution.

"It must have been a very tender hearted butcher who killed this lamb," said Mr. A., pausing in the dissection of his chop.

"Why?" asked his fellow boarder.

"He must have hesitated three or four years before striking the fatal blow."—Boston Journal.

Fertility Removed by Milk.

When the farmer is deciding whether to sell milk or cream, he should always take into account the fact that the skimmilk, if properly used at home, will add to the fertility of the land. If a cow produces 4,000 pounds of milk in a year, it contains 22 pounds of nitrogen, 11 pounds of potash and 9 pounds of phosphoric acid. This is nearly all in the skimmilk, and if this is fed on the farm it may with proper management be largely added to the fertility of the land. There should be a constant care to send from the farm that only which has the least amount possible of nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid. These substances constitute the farmer's raw material. The available amount in the land is very limited, and he should use great care to see that none of it is wasted in order that he may keep up a good supply of the finished product. Nearly $75,000,000 worth of plant food is shipped out of the country every year in our grain exports alone. Save every particle of fertilizer possible and "speed the plow," the harrow and the cultivator to bring the phosphoric acid and the potash to an available condition, and the farmer is on the right road to success.—Maine Farmer.

Salting Butter.

When I first began to make butter and it came salting time, says a correspondent of The National Stockman, all the butter was carefully taken from the churn and weighed and a proportionate amount of salt was weighed and added thereto. After this brine salting was tried and discarded. Then a compromise was adopted which suits me, as it requires a minimum amount of labor and suits the customers as well. After the butter has received its last washing, and before all the water has drained off, salt, as nearly as I can guess, to the amount of 1½ ounces to the pound is added. There is enough water in the butter to dissolve the salt, and I have a strong brine by which the butter is salted evenly. The butter in its granular state is gently stirred with a paddle, and the brine comes in contact with all part of the butter with much less working than it would do if it was gathered before sating, and there is far less salt used than if brine salting was followed.

Specks In Butter.

Theoretically milk that is properly taken care of has no specks in it that can afterward be found in the butter, says a writer in The National Stockman, but it is a sad fact that practically there are more or less specks in the milk and consequently in the butter. A cow should be brushed so clean before milking that there would be no such things as specks, and no need for strainers, but the multifarious strainers upon the market testify that the large number of cows are not brushed as they theoretically should be. I say theoretically, for it is a question with me whether a cow that is kept in a clean box stall will pay for the extra trouble of having her toilet performed twice a day, unless the milk is to be sold for some special purpose. The modified milkmen brush their cows, but they get 8 cents a quart for their milk and can afford to do so, but for the average dairyman with a clean cow it is, as I said, a question if he can do so.

Butter In Japan.

In reply to a correspondent, Consul General Gowey of Yokohama has written concerning the butter trade of Japan. The imports of butter into Japan for the year 1897 amounted to 182,484 pounds, at a value of $37,500 in gold. Of this quantity the United States furnished 73,000 pounds, the greater quantity of which came from California. The average price is about 35 cents per pound. He says he has no doubt that the United States creamery butter, properly prepared for table use and put up in attractive packages in such manner as to preserve its sweetness, would speedily control the market. Between March and October it is very difficult to get butter, as all butter becomes more or less rancid on exposure to the air, so it would have to be packed in small quantities and carefully wrapped in cloth before sealing in tins.

The bud is more easily blighted than the full-blown rose. A young girl is more susceptible to weakness and disease that will wreck her in a womanly way than she is after she has attained to healthy womanhood. Thousands of women have their lives wrecked by troubles of this delicate description because of their own ignorance and the prudery of their mothers.

Whenever the wandering demon of ill-health finds a ship adrift upon the sea of ignorance, he steps on board, takes the helm, and steers straight for the whirlstrom of death. The young woman who has not been taught the necessity of taking care of her health in a womanly way is a ship adrift upon the sea of ignorance. Diseases that will wreck her future happiness will soon assume command. Young women who suffer from weakness and disease peculiar to their sex live under a terrible nervous tension, and if they escape death are always threatened with insanity. The whole nervous system is affected by the constant drag and drain upon the delicate and feminine organs. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the one perfect and unfailing specific for every derangement and disorder of this description. It fits a woman for wifehood and motherhood It is the best of all known nerve tonics. It is the discovery of one of the most eminent and skillful specialists in disease of women.

"I was troubled three years with female weakness," writes Miss Ellen Otey, of Bedford City, Bedford Co., Va. "I had two physicians, but neither did me any good. I was troubled with pains in my left side all the time. When it was time for my monthly periods I thought I would die with pains in my back and stomach. I also had chills. I could not get up without fainting. Finally I took three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and two of his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I do not have any pains at all and am in better health now than I ever was in my life."

How to preserve health and beauty are told in Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser. It is free. For a paper-covered copy send 21 one-cent stamps, to cover mailing only; cloth binding, 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE Gundlach-Bundschu Wine Company of San Francisco and Sonoma have placed this office under obligations for one of their handsome calendars for 1899. This firm, which located on Rhinefarm, two miles east of Sonoma, forty years ago, is now one of the most noted wine companies in the United States. Their vineyards, which are the most extensive in the Sonoma Valley, have yielded since 1848, nearly 7,000,000 gallons of wine. To-day there are a limited number of vintages in its cellars between thirty and forty years old that are worth nearly their weight in gold.

THE measures now before the Legislature at Sacramento introduced for the purpose of injuring the newspaper business and jeopardizing the lives of the editors of the State, are unjust and vicious. These measures are the Works' anti-Cartoon bill, Morehouse's Homicide Bill and the bill to change the present law providing for the filing of a bond of $500 before beginning a libel suit. These measures, and particularly the Homicide Act, ought to be defeated. Should they pass, lots of people are going to get hurt and it wont be the editor every time either.

CORPORAL ARTHUR DEAN, a Santa Rosa boy, was killed in the battle of Manila last Sunday. Previous to enlisting in the army he was in the employ of the Petaluma Incubator factory as engineer. He enlisted in Battery G, Third Artillery, and sailed for Manila last July. Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Dean, parents of the young soldier, have the sympathy of every true American heart in the loss of their brave boy who died in defending the stars and stripes.

CAPT. W. B. PLESS will arrive in town to-day from San Francisco. He brings with him a model of his new dreding machine which he recently had patented. This dredging device promises to revolutionize reclamation enterprises in this State. It is a veritable wonder as a labor, time and money-saving machine. The model will be set up in this place one day next week to enable Capt. Pless' friends to witness its workings.

EDWIN C. PARKER, Deputy Head Consul of the Woodmen of the World, is down from Santa Rosa and will remain in town several days. Mr. Parker is here for the purpose of organizing a camp of the Woodmen in this city. He is a hustler and if he does not succeed in his undertaking it will be no fault of his. This new order is growing in strength every day and only last week a new camp was organized in Glen Ellen with a large membership.

THE initial number of the Geyserville Gazette is before us. This new candidate for public favor is published and printed by Messrs. Hastings & Anthony on the material formerly used by the defunct News of this place. The Gazette is neatly printed and well edited and is deserving of a liberal support by the people of Geyserville and surrounding territory.

THE river and harbor bill, carrying slightly more than $30,000,000, passed the House of Representatives at Washington Thursday by a vote of 160 to 7. A paragraph calling for an appropriation of $30,000 for further improvement of the Sacramento river was adopted and $4,000 for continuing the improvement of Petaluma creek was also voted.

WALTER S. HINKLE, a brother of Mrs. J. P. Rodgers of Petaluma, was found dead in his bed in San Francisco last Tuesday morning. His death was caused by gas asphyxiation. Mr. Hinkle was a prominent lawyer and for several years was Deputy District Attorney of the City and County of San Francisco.

SONOMA COUNTY HAPPENINGS.

Man Killed in Bennett Valley by a Falling Tree.

Big Winery Destroyed by Fire—Other Accidents and Incidents—Notes.

A feeling of pity prompts one to hope that William Gruthoff, a man found crushed under a tree somewhere in the hills between Bennett valley and Kenwood, died instantly when the accident befell him, says the Press Democrat. If he did not, then the anguish and pain he must have suffered before the end came words cannot tell. No human help was near and in the loneliness of the wood, Gruthoff, the woodchopper, died. He had been missing for several days, yet the idea he had met with his death was far from the thoughts of the ranch folks he labored for. His body was discovered on Sunday morning. On Monday morning Coroner J. G. Pierce held an inquest on the remains, and the verdict of the jury was in accordance with the facts of the discovery of the body. Death was accidental. The body was in a stooping position, the limbs of the tree literally pinning the man down. Undertaker Pedersen, in order to remove the remains, had to cut away portions of the tree before this could be accomplished. The funeral occurred Monday afternoon in the cemetery at the county farm.

The Moulton Hill wine cellar, near Cloverdale, was completely destroyed by fire Monday evening. About 200,000 gallons of wines and brandies, the distillery and several outbuildings went up in smoke with the main structure. The loss will reach $100,000, partially covered by insurance. The winery will be rebuilt on a larger scale than ever. Thirty-seven men were thrown out of employment by the fire.

NOTES.

Peterson Bros. have commenced suit in the Superior Court against the Mineral Fruit Company of Visalia to recover the sum of $1230 for breach of contract.

Dr. Kartell, who was stabbed in Healdsburg by George Lamance, a few weeks ago, died from his wounds last Saturday. The murderer, who disappeared immediately after the cutting, is still at large.

It is reported in Santa Rosa that ex-Deputy Sheriff Hy Groshong, who struck out for the Klondike gold fields about eighteen months ago, has disposed of an interest in his mining claim near Dawson City for $40,000.

THE MISSING NOVATO DAIRYMAN.

His Body Found Floating in Novato Creek.

Peter Cambetti, a Swiss dairy hand employed on the Ferris ranch, disappeared very mysteriously on January 5th, and by many it was thought that he had been murdered. This theory is undoubtedly correct, as his body was found Thursday floating in the tules which border on Novato creek. The day of his disappearance he arose from the supper table and stepped outside the house, and after that he was never seen alive. Two suspicious wounds were found on the remains but as they had been so long exposed to the elements it could not be determined whether they had been received before or after death. The deceased, although a laboring man, was quite thrifty and has $5000 to his credit in a Petaluma bank.

CHARGED WITH PETTY LARCENY.

Thomas Tracy, a Farmer, the Accused Man.

Suspected of Committing Many Acts of Petty Thievery in this Valley.

For a long time farmers residing in different parts of this valley have had their premises raided by a midnight marauder, who, after stealing harnesses, buggy robes, farming implements, carpenter tools and everything else in sight, would make good his escape, completely covering up his tracks. These raids became rather irksome of late to the victims of the midnight prowler. Complaint was made to Constable Ohm a week or two ago, since which time the officer has been keen on the scent of the petty thief, with the result that on Monday last he arrested T. Tracy on suspicion of being the culprit.

Tracy is a stranger here, having located in this valley about eight or ten months ago. He leased a small place from L. L. Lewis of the Nick Carriger ranch, where he has resided with his wife. Armed with a warrant the officer searched Tracy's premises on Monday and found in his possession a number of articles that had been purloined from adjacent ranches. The arrest then followed.

Tracy, who is now out on a $75 cash bail bond, will be tried for petty larceny in Justice Cheney's Court next Friday. He has retained the services of attorney Fred'k T. Duhring, who will conduct the defense. District Attorney Webber will prosecute.

Marie Pinelli, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Pinelli, was struck on the head with a rock and badly cut on Wednesday last. For some time past several boys who are attending the public school have made it a practice of late after school hours to chase and throw rocks at little six and seven year-old girls who are attending the Presentation Convent School, and it was one of these that threw the rock which so severly cut the little girl mentioned above. PATRICK RILEY SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Thrown Headlong From a Cart and Knocked Unconscious.

Patrick Riley, who resides on his farm on Broadway, had a narrow escape from being killed last Sunday morning. While riding into town in a cart his horse became unmanageable and ran away when nearly opposite Chase's stables on Second-street East. As the animal turned into Napa street the wheels of the cart collided with the curbing near the residence of W. O. Hocker. There was a loud crash and Riley was seen to shoot headlong over the dashboard of the cart and strike the sidewalk with terrific force. He was knocked unconscious and lay where he fell, in a pool of blood, which flowed from a jagged wound on the back of his head extending from behind his right ear nearly to the crown of his head. Dr. Davis was sent for and had the injured man removed to the Sonoma House, where he attended to his hurts. For some time after the accident Riley, who is over sixty years of age, was delirious from the injury to his head and had to be placed under restraint. At latest accounts Mr. Riley was improving and in a fair way to recovery.

The runaway horse, after Mr. Riley had been thrown out of the cart, rushed madly along Napa street and thence down Broadway and came near colliding with several carts and buggies in his mad career.

Mr. Riley, formerly of Santa Rosa, is a new comer here and is the father of the late Geo. Riley, who died very suddenly in San Francisco a couple of months ago and who left a small estate to be administered upon in this place.

Can Cubans Govern Themselves?

One of the best known diplomatists recently declared that the Cubans are utterly incapable of governing themselves and that the United States must maintain its present control indefinitely, or else annex the island. There will be those who will dispute this opinion, but there are none who dispute the the well established fact that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is capable of governing and controlling common diseases of stomach, liver, kidneys and blood. It is a remedy that is backed by fifty years of success. It is an ideal medicine for constipation; the most effective purifier for the blood; a tissue and strength builder for those who are predisposed to lung troubles, and for nervousness it is of wonderful benefit. It stirs up a lazy liver, stimulates inactive kidneys and as an appetizer is incomparable. Those whose stomachs are out of order should not fail to try a botttle.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local reatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars reward for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address.

CARE OF CALVES.

How to Wean Them and Teach Them to Drink.

A great deal of the profit of weaning calves, whether grown by hand or nursed by their dams, will depend very much on the kind of care they receive. We do not care how good their breeding may be or how well they may be fed as yearlings or finished for the market, they will not realize their full promise and possibilities unless they are properly cared for the first winter. There are various devices to wean calves and make them drink, among which is an artificial feeder in imitation of a cow's udder. A correspondent of Hoard's Dairyman gives the following sensible advice: "Instinct teaches the calf where to seek nourishment and to get it, and I would not interfere with nature till the calf is three days old and acquires a little experience, if not sense. For the good of the cow, however, I would not allow him to suck more than twice a day. Then after three days, by adopting Mr. Cheever's plan, once to get the calf in 'sucking mood,' any person who will be gentle and patient need have no trouble in teaching a calf to drink without help within the next two days. I speak from an experience of forty years on the farm, and have broken a great many calves to feed. I used only gentle means and not one time in twenty did I need more than three trials to 'break' a calf. I fed night and morning, and almost invariably at the fourth feeding and often at the third the calf would put his head in the pail and drink without any assistance from me except to hold up the pail before him. I make no exception of 'obstinate' calves, for I do not believe in them. The obstinacy is really in another quarter."

CALF FEEDER.

Liquid Food and the Milk Yield.

According to The British Dairy Farmer, M. Dancel, principal of one of the dairy schools in France, reports his experiments to determine the effect of the quantity of water cows drink upon quantity and quality of milk. He says that by inducing cows to drink more water the quantity of milk yielded can be increased without injuring its quality. He asserts that the amount of milk is proportional to the quantity of the water drunk. In experimenting upon cows fed in the stall with dry fodder, that gave only 9 to 12 quarts of milk a day, when this dry food was moistened with from 18 to 28 quarts of water daily their yield of milk was increased up to 12 to 14 quarts a day. Besides this water taken with the food, the cows were allowed to drink the same as before, and their thirst was excited by adding a little salt to the fodder. The milk was of good quality and the amount of butter satisfactory. He found by a series of observations that the quantity of water habitually drunk by each cow was a criterion to judge of the quantity of milk that she would yield. A cow that does not drink as much as 27 quarts of water a day is a poor milker, giving only 5½ to 7 quarts a day, but all cows which drink as much as 50 quarts of water daily gave from 18 to 23 quarts of milk daily. He believes the amount of water drunk by a cow is a test of her value as a milker.

Mixing Cream.

We often hear a great deal about the importance of testing the cows with a Babcock tester in order to find which are the profitable dairy animals, says a writer in The National Stockman, but there is little said about the importance of testing the buttermilk. A friend of mine in town said that he engaged to take some buttermilk from a farmer who came to market, and while the first lot was nice and rich the second lot was poor as could be. He thought the farmer was cheating him, but in all probability the farmer did not know until his butter was churned whether the buttermilk was to be poor or rich, as the richness of the buttermilk depends entirely upon the condition of the cream when it is put into the churn. Cream that has not been thoroughly mixed 12 or more hours previous to churning is almost sure to lose some of the butter in the buttermilk. The reason is obvious. Cream of different degrees of sourness requires different time for the butter to come, and the sourest cream comes first, and the buttermilk from this cream mixes with the cream that is not quite so sour and has not as yet come, and it is all drawn off as buttermilk.

Salicylic Acid In Milk.

Dr. Henry Leffman of Philadelphia, a prominent chemist of that city, recently stated that many diseases of infants which occur during the summer months may be induced by the use of milk and artificial foods which contain salicylic acid. He stated that the drug had an enormous and increasing sale, and that several forms are being put upon the market. Speaking of the artificial form used by brewers in the preparation of bottled beer, he thought it poisonous and that its sale should be prohibited. In Trenton recently salicylic acid in milk caused the death of several children.—Medical Times.

Notice of Business Change.

The old saying that "the unlooked-for always happens" may be true in the present instance. The Sonoma News is no more! Having sold the paper and its good will to Mr. Granice, the business and subscription books pass into his hands. Those who are in arrears for their paper will please pay Mr. Granice and those who have paid in advance will receive the INDEX-TRIBUNE to full extent of their subscriptions.

There are three reasons I might give for making this change. It is well known that I did not buy the News with the intention of running it myself. A person usually sells a commercial commodity when the price asked is accepted. The third reason is the more potent one—our patronizing territory is too limited to properly support two weekly newspapers.

But we do need and must have for the weal of the commonwealth one good, wide-awake paper, which shall be alive to the best interests of our people, and such a paper Mr. Granice will be able to furnish us providing he has the good will and support his paper merits. So we sincerely hope all our subscribers and patrons will lend a hand.

With a thank you to our friends and wishes for the success of the INDEX-TRIBUNE we break our quill.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours: a sediment or setting indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. At druggists fifty cents or one dollar.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, if you send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure and mention that you read this generous offer in the INDEX-TRIBUNE.

Effects of Horseshoeing.

The effects of horseshoeing upon the legs of horses, says the London Live Stock Journal, is a subject which obtains too little attention. In America it apparently obtains too much, for there the trainers and farriers seem to imagine that they can correct every imaginable fault of action or conformation by fanciful kinds of shoes. It is questionable if very much harm or good can be done to the limbs of adult horses. The joints and ligaments of the adult are so firmly set that the effect of uneven bearings of shoes or uneven foot surfaces are spent upon the coronet and pastern joints. With young horses, and more especially foals, whose tissues are soft and plastic, the foot reacts distinctly and rapidly upon the limb. Straight pasterns may be made worse by allowing the heels of the hoof to remain too high, while excess of slope in these bones may be exaggerated by permitting the toe to grow too long. Unequal height of the sides of the hoof affects the leg, and twisting of the fetlock joints follows. It is said that by using shoes made higher on one side of the foot than on the other this twisting action may alter the conformation of the limb as high up as the knee and hock. If this be so, a farrier artist might so modify the legs of foals as to prevent calf knees, bowlegs and cowhocks. The reactions of disproportionate feet do not require shoes to produce them. The irregular growth of the hoof when unshod is capable of injuring the formation of the leg, and even if a breeder is not skilled enough to artificially correct the faults of limb in his stock he may always take care no harm is done. He may occasionally look to the feet and see that they are kept fairly proportionate.

Preventing Wool From Shrinking.

It is a well known fact that chlorine has the effect of preventing wool from felting. It would therefore presumably prevent wool fabrics from shrinking, for it is the felting property of wool that brings about the shrinkage during washing operations. A solution of three pounds of bleaching powder for each 100 pounds weight of wool is made and the goods rapidly immersed in this bath. After remaining in about 10 to 15 minutes they are taken out, put into a bath of hydrochloric acid of 2 degrees for ten minutes, and then thoroughly washed. It is not advisable to use more than three pounds of bleaching powder, or otherwise the goods will be yellowish in color and have a harsh feel.—Popular Science.
